The possibility that the League of

By Associated Press
Chippewa Falls—A farmer living near Colfax has forwarded to Assemblyman J. D. Miller a bill for $103.75 for alleged damages to his hen roost by skunks which are protected by state law. The farmer says the skunks did their nefarious work because it was illegal for him to protect his own property by shooting them. Assemblyman Miller says the bill is perfectly valid, but he fears the number of skunk claims may grow to bothersome proportions.

HUGHES STICKS TO HELM IN STORM

Secretary Will Not Quit—Senate Irreconcilables On War Path

BY DAVID LAWRENCE
Copyright 1923 by the Post Pub. Co.
Washington—The "irreconcilables" of the senate are on the warpath again. They beat the Versailles treaty and League of Nations covenant and succeeded in compelling Secretary Hughes to make a separate treaty with Berlin. Now they fear he is bending toward more participation in European affairs. Rumors that Mr. Hughes intends to resign as secretary of state have met with emphatic denial from executive quarters.

And while the "irreconcilables" want to show Mr. Hughes that they still believe in keeping hands off Europe, formally, informally, through personal or unofficial observers or any other channel, members of the senate are busy with the Borah resolution calling for an economic conference was tabled with the promise that the administration would do something to improve the foreign markets for farm products.

PLENTY OF CHARGES
Charges and counter-charges that the administration is on the one hand doing too much to involve America in European quarrels and that on the other hand, the same administration isn't doing enough are filling the air. And the Democrats are watching their opportunity to add fuel to the flames in the hope that they may profit politically out of the general conflagration, which they probably will unless the administration takes a definite stand either for or against the "irreconcilables" and either uses its influence in European affairs actively or keeps out altogether.

will go to prison, even should she be

That is the general opinion in official circles and the rank and file of the Wisconsin legislature Tuesday by Mr. El-it inheritance to this figure.

At the opening of the diet for business Tuesday, Premier Kato and

7 Ships of Russian Refugee Fleet Lost; Fear 500 Dead

Water Everywhere, But Had Only Beer To Drink

By Associated Press
Galveston, Tex.—Subsisting for 11 days on a diet of British beer, three men half dead from exhaustion, ex-

the Morgan line steamer, Elcodiente, 225 miles off the Carolina coast Jan.

from Boston stated that Mr. Stiles was a former Appleton resident, but away in motor trucks.

had stolen the livery of the original order. He was one of several speakers at a meeting called by the American Unity league to discuss ways and means for combating the hooded organization. He said that when the modern klan was organized a few years ago he declined an invitation to join warning the organizers "that if they dared to use the disguise in a secret oath bound order today, with the courts of law working under a civilized government, the end was sure, riot, anarchy, bloodshed and martial law."

"We have already reached the riot

Missing Vessels Not Heard From For Two Weeks — Five Other Crafts Laden With People Have No Place to Land

Manila.—Fear is expressed here that seven Russian refugee ships with more than 500 persons aboard, have been lost in the China Sea enroute from Shanghai to the Philippines as part of Admiral Stark's fleet of Vladivostok exiles, five ships of which are anchored near here. The missing vessels have not been heard from for more than two weeks.

Admiral Stark is with the ships which have found temporary haven in Bolinao cove. But his white fleet of homeless Siberians has no place on earth to land permanently.
Pushed onward first from Korea, then from China, it was given permission only to linger a while in the Philippines. Plans may be worked out however, for the refugees to remain in the Philippines. They could be admitted under the immigration laws, but the question of absorbing them in business on the islands, presents a difficult problem. A majority of the Russian colony are sailors and it has been suggested that they could be absorbed easily if sent to the United States.

Admiral Stark and his officers asserted that they were desirous of remaining in the Philippines or anywhere else under the American flag.
Discussing the matter aboard the flagship, they told the Associated Press that if they returned to Vladivostok they would be killed by the Soviet forces.

noted philosopher author and Zionpointed to him Tuesday as something of a prophet in his own time.

Arrested by the French during the World war but subsequently paroled, Nordau went to Madrid where he predicted that the great struggle would have dire results. To him is attributed this statement:
"The vanquished will early on intolerable exasperation, and even the conquerors soon will be pervaded by deep disappointment and wrath when they realize the fact—as they will—that their efforts, sufferings and triumphs will have yielded them no palpable effect whatever and will not have rendered easier and more prosperous their existence and that of their families; on the contrary, will have made it more toilsome,
hard and gloomy."

NEWSPAPERMAN AND INVENTOR IS DEAD

Chicago—Addison C. Thomas, who a quarter of a century ago was one of the most widely known newspapermen in the United States, died Tuesday at the West Suburban hospital.
The cause of his death was stomach ailment which had recently prevented him from taking any solid food.

Mr. Thomas, who was born July 14, 1851, was for a long time superintendent of the central division of the Associated Press, with headquarters in Chicago.

In developing the present extensive leased wire systems of the Associated Press, Mr. Thomas played an important role and for a number of years was superintendent of this leased wire system. He was a practical telegrapher.

bank cashier is dead

By Associated Press

flight of Clyde R. Stephens, cashier of the Monfort State bank at Mont-fort, Wis. who disappeared on June

Tuesday when a blaze was discovered in the butler's pantry. The fire was

Many Offer
Sleighs For Sale

A few nights ago this ad appeared in the Want Ads in the Post-Crescent:
Wanted At Once: A good sleigh. Phone 1744.
Results were in evidence almost as soon as the paper was on the streets. The advertiser had in all over thirty calls from people who had a sleigh that they were willing to sell.
This again proves that Want Ads are equally as efficient in finding sellers as in finding buyers.
WHAT DO YOU WANT TO BUY?

PLACARD CAMPUS TO EXPRESS IRE

Students Use Posters To Protest Brokaw Hall Rules And Lawrentian Attitude

Student opinion is being given a considerable airing at Lawrence college again as the result of large posters which decorated almost every building on the campus Monday. The posters ridicule the administration of Brokaw hall and the attitude of the college authorities toward the Lawrentian. The authors are not known, but the opinion on the campus is that a group of men who live at Brokaw hall are responsible.

The posters are the result of Dr. Samuel Plantz refusing to continue to buy 300 copies of the college weekly for advertising purposes if the editorial in that paper continued to criticize the college in such a way that it would give a bad impression to high school students who read the paper. He said on Monday morning that he had not asked the paper to change its policy because as long as it was a student paper, the student opinion should be expressed. The resignation of Ralph Culnan as editorial writer was the result of Dr. Plantz's message to the staff of the student paper.

Every member of the Lawrence college faculty received a copy of the poster on Monday morning. Dr. Plantz had nothing but praise for the administration of Brokaw hall under the direction of Prof. F. M. Ingler. He said that Dr. Ingler's system of fines was the only method of discipline that had proved effective in the boys' dormitory.

A story of the High Sierras with all the grandeur and primitive emotions of that region, "The Silent Call" has been announced as the feature attraction at the Elite Theatre commencing today and running for 3 days. It is the first Laurence Trimble-Jane Murfin production, presented by H. O. Davis and distributed by Associated First National Pictures, Inc. One of the features of interest in the picture is that the cast of principals consists of seven men, one girl, and Strongheart, the most intelligent police dog in the entire world, whose performance in this photoplay will doubtless make him the most beloved animal on the screen or stage.

Throughout the dramatic incidents of the plot that involve the human characters of the story, runs the thread of life of Strongheart; the cross pull between the wolf and dog natures in him, his final mastery of the former and his vindication in the eyes of all, because of his heroism in rescuing the hero and heroine from the real danger that confronts them. It is the dog who first realizes the love between Moran and Betty Houston, played respectively by John Bowers and Kathryn McGuire, and who wreaks vengeance on the villain, Brent, portrayed by William Dyer. It is Strongheart, too, who finally brings the parted lovers together to happiness.

Several claims have been made with entire justification for "The Silent Call." It brings as never before to the silver sheet the limitless beauty of the Sierras. In the dog, Strongheart will be found perhaps the greatest animal actor ever seen on the screen or stage, absolutely natural of heart and powerful of strength.

"IS MATRIMONY A FAILURE?" DELIGHTFUL

Fischer's Appleton theatre last evening fairly shook with laughter. At one time it was the women; then a few seconds later the men and then at odd intervals it was both together. This sequence of incidents so happened because the picture that was being screened fitted itself to these outbursts of spontaneous laughter. It was a Paramount Special comedy, "Is Matrimony a Failure?" filmed with an all star cast and directed by James Cruze.

I SPIED TODAY

Today's I Spied items approach the standard of the Post-Crescent deserts. The items are interesting and give the essential details. Every reader of The Post-Crescent is invited to become a contributor to this popular section. The reward is worth the effort.

Two tickets to the Little theatre where "The Silent Call" is being shown Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, are given for each item printed. Contributors should call for their tickets immediately after their items are printed. The tickets will be accepted by the Little management for any performance within a week of the date of issue, except on Sunday and holidays. All stories must be signed with the name of the writer.

OF COURSE, THEY DO

Appleton people do read your "I Spied" column.
How do I know?
Because exactly 52 people have kidded, joshed and jollied the pleasingly plump man—the "Why don't you refrain from wearing rubbers" man, whose "sit-down" experience I revealed in last Saturday's column.

And, the description of him must have been accurate, for his name was not mentioned, nor was he otherwise described than a "pleasingly plump man of about 40 carrying an armful of papers."

Aren't there any other pleasingly plump men of 40 who might carry an armful of papers in Appleton?

"When I saw him this morning, he had executed another slippery slide. The evidence was on his back, thus time, however, rather than on his knees and shins here he must have enjoyed looking at the sunshine on the way down."

Another one for the column, thought I, as I said to him—
"Again? When, where, what time and why?"

Answered he, "Self-same spot, about the same time, and because, I presume, everybody loves a fat man, and the act of upsetting himself on the icy sidewalk."
"What did some fresh thing say this time?" queried I.
"Why don't you wear a pair of skates?"

"And, what did you say to him?"
"I said, 'Go to — Kaukauna.'"
And I, humble author of this contribution said, "Try ashes on the soles of your No. 10s. That may help some."

IT CAME BACK AGAIN

In a dove loft on North Division st. I saw a young dove continually twitching its wings and crowding to the side of the nest. This being unusual I investigated and found a mouse snugly tucked under the dove's wing to keep warm. Upon being discovered the mouse scampered into a nearby hole. I quietly stepped over to the other side of the room. In a few minutes the mouse came back and quickly crowded under the wing.

MAKE GOOD ASH RECEIVER

Saturday night when two young girls wearing Russian boots were passing Carr and Hansen's pool room, two fellows came out and walked behind them. One fellow got near enough so that he could flick his cigarette ashes into the girl's boot. When she felt the hot ashes, she turned around and hit him smartly on the face. He went away holding his jaw.

HE KNEW WHEN TO EAT IT

Sunday afternoon I went walking down Story-st with a chocolate cigar in my mouth. I would take the cigar out and blow the steam from my mouth and it would look like smoke. I passed an old lady and she stopped still and watched me with that "Want-I-tell-you-mother" look. Then I knew enough to eat the cigar. E. T.

FORD TRUCK TIPS OVER

The Ford truck which bears the license 2186 was going east on Washington st. when the Reo truck owned by the Brettschneider Furniture company was going south on Morrison-st at 9:15 Monday morning. The driver of the Ford could not stop in time to avoid a collision, so he turned to go south on Morrison-st too. He turned too sharply and the truck tipped over. The two men in the Ford crawled out, set the truck up again and went their way. No one was hurt.

HE SAT ON THE EGGS

I was waiting in a dark shanty on the interurban line for a street car when a man came on. It was very dark and he sat down in the lap of a woman who was waiting for the car also. She was holding a bag of fresh eggs which the weight of the man broke. He paid for the eggs and then decided not to wait any longer for the car.

HE SPILLED THE MILK

A short and snappy turn at the corner of College-ave and Appleton-st smashed two cases of bottled milk Sunday morning. The driver of the milk truck was anxious to get there in a hurry and in turning the corner, two cases fell to the pavement, smashing the bottles and spilling the milk.

AGAIN NO ONE WAS HURT

The Badger Furnace Company truck broke a rear wheel on Pacific-st at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon. The car just swung to one side of the road and the rear wheel broke.

HEY, MISTER, TURN AROUND

Monday afternoon, at 3:45, as I was walking along in front of Thiede's, a garage "trouble car" drove west up the Avenue. The broken rear wheels of a Ford roadster were hoisted on the rear part of the first car, which left only the front wheels of the disabled Ford on the ground, or, course, running backward.

A man sat in the driver's seat of the Ford, steering backward and looked very ridiculous in his inclined position. He realized himself the object of the attention of those on the sidewalk.

GETS LATEST EDITION HERE

Monday evening at 6:30 when the corner at Oneida st and College-ave is rather quiet, my chum and I noticed an elderly woman standing beside the corner refuse can. She was picking out the crushed newspapers and hurriedly scanning the headlines. Having evidently picked out the most desirable papers, she folded them carefully and walked away with them tucked under her arm.

NO MORE SLEIGH BELLS

Sunday afternoon I saw three sleigh loads of girls riding past the house. They were laughing and singing and having a jolly time. I'm sure they couldn't have had as merry a time as we used to have sleighing when I was a little girl, for we decorated our horses and sleighs with red, white and blue streamers, and we always had lots of sleigh bells. And what is a sleigh ride without sleigh bells "to jingle-jingle-jingle!"

LOVE'S YOUNG DREAM

Saturday evening a young couple were using the driveway near the T. M. C. A. tennis courts to do their last minute courting. The young man would look around the corner of the building to see if anyone was approaching and then go back for another kiss and hug. After indulging for about 15 minutes they parted company each taking a different direction. This performance was witnessed from a car parked at the curb.

OSHKOSH HOCKEY CLUB DEFEATS NEENAH, 5-3

In its first game since organization, Neenah Hockey club was defeated by the Oshkosh team by a score of 5 to 3 Sunday afternoon. The game was played at Menominee park, Oshkosh, before a crowd of 4,000 to 5,000 persons. It was a clean game throughout, there being no penalties imposed. At the end of the second period, the Neenah men had Oshkosh tied 2 to 2. Oshkosh regained its lead in the third period when the score stood 4 to 2. In the last period Neenah rallied and threatened to tie again, but Oshkosh increased its gain with another score in the last few minutes of play.

LEGISLATIVE PROSPECTS

It looks as though the legislature were to fulfill the expectations of those who approached its sitting with misgivings. There is a frank and open alliance between the administration and the Socialists. Not only was the assistance of the Socialists in organizing the legislature accepted by the administration, but there is prompt recognition of the service in the appointment of Socialists to fifteen committee memberships in the two houses. This is a good start toward a socialistic regime at Madison and if the administration is consistent it will have to carry out the alliance in terms of legislation. A working agreement between Socialists and the Blaine forces necessitate waiving some theoretical points of difference in order to secure practical results, and this undoubtedly will be done. The Socialists will not get all that they ask, but they will get a good deal and practically all important bills enacted into law will have their full or modified approval. This, at least, is indicated by the preliminaries at Madison.

While the details of tax legislation can only be speculated upon in the light of the governor's message, it is clear that it is to be directed primarily against productive enterprise, with liberal exemptions to agriculture. In addition we are to have publicity of money-making, the essential purpose of which is class discrimination. Another indication of class discrimination is the proposal to pass a law requiring the appointment of representatives of farm and labor to places on certain state boards and commissions of a general character. Probably the most radical offering yet submitted is that to abolish the national guard. This is a Socialist-radical scheme, the principal purpose of which is to deprive property of protection in case of strikes and put an end to the use of troops in industrial disturbances. Undoubtedly a hard fight will be made by its proponents to force its adoption, but we can hardly believe that either Mr. Blaine or Mr. LaFollette would consent to the enactment of a measure which placed the security of life and property in Wisconsin at the mercy of mob violence, and took away from the state the power to enforce law and order and to maintain its sovereignty.

Already there are rumors at Madison of differences between La Follette and Blaine, while some of the newspapers which have been supporting the administration most vigorously are voicing strong criticism of radical tendencies which they believe will be subversive of the material interests of Wisconsin as well as of social and economic justice. However this may be, the administration is in complete control of the legislature and can carry through any program it desires. Furthermore, it will be held responsible for the results of legislation. The conservative element of the state, which has been chiefly instrumental in the development of Wisconsin and which represents its commercial, agricultural and industrial strength, is powerless to interpose a restraining hand upon either the legislature or the governor. It has no voice and no influence at Madison. It will have to take whatever happens there in a spirit of fortitude, if not resignation. The consequences of any ill-conceived legislation may appear to fall primarily upon this element, but in the end they will fall most severely upon those it is designed to help, rather than upon those it is designed to cripple.

TURKISH ATONEMENT

"Vengeance is mine, and I will repay, saith the Lord." The Terrible Turk may be paid in full, as time passes, for his hideous cruelty in slaughtering and exiling nearly all the racial minorities within the shrunken borders of present Turkey.

It has been remarked often that the Turk has never been successful except as an overlord of subject populations. In history he has been a conqueror, taskmaster and tax-collector. Until the Turkish conquests of the Middle ages, there was no Turkish history. The Turks were merely a wandering tribe. They have never absorbed the civilization they invaded. They have never learned modern industry and commerce. They have shown little capacity for art, literature and science. Greeks, Armenians and other subject peoples have done their manufacturing and trading and much of their agriculture. Speaking in general, they have lived as parasites on races superior to them in nearly every respect except that of brute force.

There is nothing in the Turks' record indicating ability to function and thrive as a nation, in competition with modern nations, on a normal peace basis. The more they get rid of their racial rivals, therefore, and the more they are thrown back upon their own resources, the less of a menace Turkey is likely to be a generation from now.

THE CRISIS IN EUROPE

The situation resulting from the invasion of Germany by the French military expedition appears on the surface to be growing steadily worse. The immediate danger lies in the probability that German economic resistance may cause the invaders to resort to coercive measures so extreme that they may provoke armed collision and bloodshed. The menace of an ultimate union between Germany and Russia in out-and-out war with France lurks in the background. The consequences of such a war no one can foresee, but it is conceivable that they might be disastrous to France herself and certainly the possibilities are highly disturbing to the general stability and peace of Europe. Although Great Britain has forsaken France in her dubious adventure, it is altogether likely that she would be drawn into a Russo-German conflict with France, for in the last analysis her political and social interests lie with her erstwhile ally.

The French expedition will either be successful or unsuccessful. If it is successful its end will be accomplished, but if it is unsuccessful, as the indications are it may be, then it would seem that peaceful intervention through the agency of Great Britain or the United States, or both, is the only solution of the problem that can prevent a disaster. Undoubtedly Great Britain will do everything within her power and resources to bring about an amicable adjustment when things have reached an impasse. The United States may desire to do so, but it labors under the double disadvantage of not being a party to the Versailles treaty and of the political issue which has been made of the European middle in this country. We are as completely without a policy relating to Europe today as we were three years ago. Nobody knows where we are "at," and there are no signs at Washington to indicate a departure from the policy of watchful waiting. We have had some symptoms of an abandonment of isolation, but they have been promptly smothered by the irreconcilables who still seem to be able to intimidate a wavering state department.

The worst of it is that the jam in Europe is being held up by the isolation advocates as proof of the wisdom of the rejection by the United States of all responsibility connected with the peace settlement and the affairs of Europe. Yet the fact remains, plausible as this contention may appear to those whose ears are attuned to its acceptance, that had the United States done its full part in the solution of European problems in the beginning, the probability is the extremely grave conditions and turmoil which exist there now never would have developed. This government may wrap the cloak of isolation ever so tightly about it, but it cannot shut out international obligations which thus far have been repudiated.

BATTERY BURNS

Probably very few professional or amateur automobile mechanics know that there is a certain risk of serious injury to the eyes by burns from the acid in the storage battery. Dr. Harry S. Grady calls attention to this danger and reports some cases of battery burns in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

A fully charged battery has a temperature as high as 284 degrees F., and the hydrogen gas given off by the electrolytic change in the sulphuric acid appears as bubbles in the battery solution; the battery is said to be "gassing." When a battery is in this fully charged state there is danger of ignition of the hydrogen by a spark, a glowing cigarette or cigar, or an open flame, with disastrous effect for any one so unfortunate as to be working over the battery at the moment. There is more or less dead space within the battery above the level of the battery solution, and the hydrogen may accumulate there. Then, if accidental ignition occurs it is practically explosive, exerting great pressure upon the battery solution and perhaps forcing the solution out in a sudden spurt through the vent, and as Dr. Grady says, "woe betide the flesh that lies within the range of the hot sulphuric acid."

One man was removing a fully charged battery from the charging bench when a live wire short circuited on a terminal, causing a spark near the vent, which exploded the gas, shooting the hot sulphuric acid into the man's eyes. The eye was immediately washed out with water, later, when the physician attended with a solution of sodium bicarbonate. Fortunately the cornea injury was not great in this case and no scar remained. In other instances opacity of the cornea remains and the vision is permanently impaired.

Dr. Grady suggests that a protective goggles should be worn by men charging batteries, especially when blow torches are used for soldering battery connections, and that a large bottle of saturated solution of sodium bicarbonate be kept in every shop for the immediate first aid treatment of eyes burned by acid, the solution being applied with an eye cup. After repeated washing of the eye with several cupfuls of the solution, the eye should be filled with sterile boric petrolatum and the victim sent to the nearest physician.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Food Combination Foolishness

I have read that milk should be taken with meals.—Mrs. W. J. H.

Answer—And that isn't by any means the most ridiculous thing you will read if you pursue the same line of reading further. Milk should be taken with meals, along with any other wholesome food, which may please your taste.

Hammer Toes

Please tell me if there is any cure for what the doctors call hammer toes.—C. A.

Answer—In recent cases the deformity may be overcome by retaining the toe in a corrected position by means of a strip of zinc oxide adhesive plaster about half an inch wide applied over the hammer toe and under the toes on either side. In cases long established this will fail. The shortened tendon must be divided by the surgeon (this is done under the skin with local anesthesia) and the toe retained in corrected position for two weeks.

Superstition

Answer—Pure, unadulterated superstition. (Copyright, National Newspaper Service.)

$300,000 Fortune Left
By World Famous Humorist

(From the New York World.)
Marshall P. Wilder was worth $294,333 through making people laugh.

Seven years after the famous humorist's death an application for the settlement of his estate has been filed in the Surrogate's court.

Wilder, "the prince of entertainers," started out in life with a tremendous handicap. Crippled when he fell from the arms of his nurse, his body was dwarfed far below ordinary standards, and suffering from impaired health his schooling had to be curtailed.

He was born at Geneva, N. Y., September 15, 1859, the son of a physician, who devoted nearly the rest of his life to the care of his boy. It was hearing a public reading at Corinthian hall in Rochester that first gave Wilder the ambition to become an entertainer. A droll, expressive face above his stunted body encouraged him further. He discovered that he had a real talent for mimicry and a gift of elocution.

WAS A PIN BOY
Before his dream came true he had to be content with the prosaic job of looking after the bowling alleys and storeroom of a summer resort hotel. Later he entered Bradstreet's agency as a file boy. He was earning just $20 a month when the first chance came to turn the laughter of people to his own profit. A reception was given by a rich society woman. Wilder entertained and received fifty cents. It was a beginning, however, and the tour of society drawing rooms began.

At 24 he decided to try his luck in London. At the Savoy Club he met Irving, and Irving boomed him. Afterward Earl Crawford arranged for him to appear before the prince of Wales, who became King Edward VII. That was the beginning of success for Wilder. He got ten guineas for the evening's performance and made fourteen engagements on the strength of it.

The popularity of Wilder among the English aristocracy increased, and after some months he returned to New York with all the prestige of a London reputation.

FAVORITE OF SOCIETY
In New York he was lionized. Society sought him out and the public thronged to hear his merry tales and whimsical anecdotes. When he entered vaudeville he was a top-liner wherever he appeared.

In addition to his work on the stage, Wilder contributed to newspapers and periodicals and wrote several books, among which were "People I've Smiled With," "The Sunny Side of the Street," and "Smiling Round the World."

In 1905 Wilder married Miss Sophie Cornell Banks of Brooklyn, and the two left for a trip around the world, returning in 1906.

Then in 1910 the New York dailies carried big headlines. A message from Atlantic City told of Wilder's critical illness. His physician said he might not live. His friends hurried to his bedside.

The next day Wilder talked over the long distance telephone to the newspapers and flatly denied that he was dying. He confessed only to an attack of heart trouble due to the fact that the Glants had been losing so many games.

The humorist had two children, Marshall P., Jr., and Grace Isabel. Mrs. Wilder died in 1913, after an operation, and a little more than a year later Marshall P. Wilder died at St. Paul, January 10, 1915.

The estate consists chiefly of a New York apartment house which produces an income of approximately $30,000 a year, to be divided between his 16-year-old son and his 17-year-old daughter.

TELLS JOKE ON HIMSELF
Much of Wilder's success was due to his business ability and shrewdness in commercial affairs. He never employed a manager in all his career as a public entertainer.

Wilder did not mind jokes on himself. He told this one: "Many jokes have been played upon me by intimate friends. I remember Elbert Hubbard once took me from Chicago to New York on a half ticket. When the conductor came around and Elbert handed him the ticket, he looked at me, then at Hubbard, and said: 'How old is your son?'"

"He's seven right enough," answered Hubbard, and gazed out of the window, indifferently.

"He needs a shirt," remarked the conductor as he punched the tickets and started on.

Hubbard stopped the conductor. "If you think the little fellow is over age," he said, "why don't you ask me to pay full fare for him?"

"Well," he said, "it's like this. I thought that any man who had as much cheek as you two have should be rewarded."

"But it was carrying a joke too far," Wilder adds, "when Elbert walked into the dining car, tied a napkin under my chin, lifted me into a high chair, and ordered a waiter to give me a bowl of bread and butter, while he sat opposite and ordered fried chicken and everything nice on the bill of fare."

Church Aim Is To Build Character

(From sermon by the Rev. E. W. Wright in Memorial Presbyterian church, Sunday morning, Jan. 21)

"Why does the church keep on adding members? What use is made of them, when they do join the church?" Thus ask some, filled with theories of social and economic changes, the realization of which they deem the great end of human life.

It is a mistake to idealize a theory or institution above man. Man is the great end in himself. Work directly for the individual needs no apology. The spiritual work which the church does for man, reaches directly by the end that social and political theories aim at: the upbuilding of character, and peace of soul.

To join a church is not to come to a standstill; the church is a marching column. It is no more good to have one's name on a church roll than to have it on a tombstone; but to join the church and share its work, is to become a part of the mightiest force.

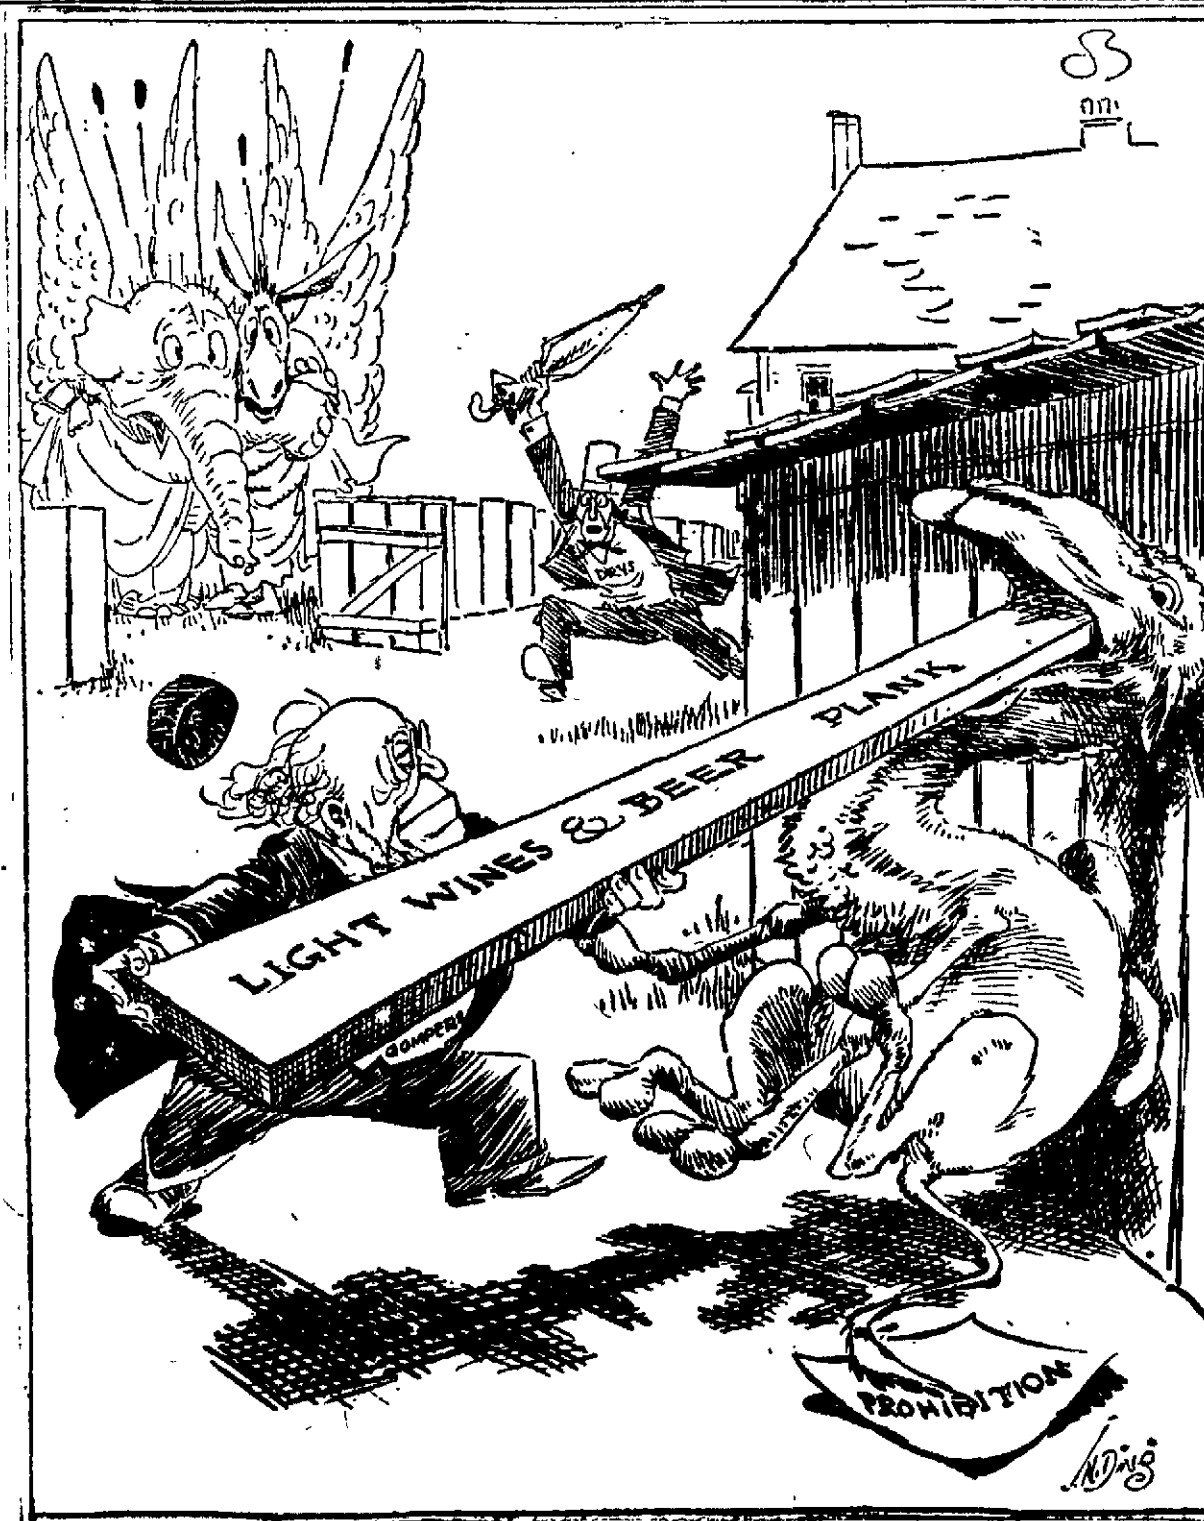

Force in individuals differs. A regiment of pagans may be as well unformed and drilled as a regiment of ardent Christians; with nothing to differentiate them to the eyes; yet the fighting force of the Christian regiment is the greater. To add this strange force to the individual is sufficient aim for a church.

The church should stick to its task. The surgeon, with a man on the operating table does not utilize the opportunity to argue political or social theories. Nor does the judge on the bench with a crowded court room before him. The surgeon's office hours and the judge's court days are "holy" and "sacred" for their professional activities. The church should keep itself and its appointed day sacred for work for souls.

HUGE DAIRY FIRM LEASES SEYMOUR CO-OP CREAMERY

Fairmont Creamery Company, With Branch At Green Bay,
To Take Charge

Special to Post-Crescent
Seymour — Fairmont Creamery company, one of the largest dairying concerns in the middlewest, has leased the creamery here owned by Seymour Cooperative Creamery company, following a conference Monday of representatives of the Fairmont company and directors of the Seymour concern.

The creamery will be one of the supply sources for the immense branch maintained by the Fairmont company at Green Bay, and it is believed the Green Bay manager will have charge at Seymour. All details of the deal have not been completed. The Fairmont company has branches in many of the principal dairying centers of several states.

This deal ends attempts of both stockholders and directors to make a satisfactory disposition of the plant, after it had been found that refinancing was not bringing a ready response. The directors were empowered by the stockholders at the annual meeting to either attempt to relieve the financial situation through aid by the present owners or make a satisfactory deal. Several offers had been received from companies desiring to convert the creamery into a condenser, but the farmers objected to this move.

A large number of farmers in this locality organized the concern as a cooperative company several years ago, with Arthur Otto as manager. The drop in milk prices two years ago hampered the company's progress sufficiently to make changes necessary.

Badger Milk Would Make Small Ocean

Do you know that if the milk produced in one year by Wisconsin dairymen was dumped in one place, a lake one mile long, one-half mile wide, and over six feet deep, containing over ten billion pounds of milk would be formed?

This is just one of the interesting facts about our dairy industry discussed in the circular of the agricultural extension service of the University of Wisconsin, on "Wisconsin, a Source of Dairy Cattle." The circular, which may be obtained by merely writing for it, tells about the production of butter, cheese, market and condensed milk.

The fact that Wisconsin annually sells over twenty-eight thousand dairy cattle, at high prices to other states and foreign countries, is especially emphasized as an especially attractive source of revenue for dairymen. The advertising of high producing cows by cow testing associations, and county agents, is recognized as attracting out-of-state buyers. Nor is the fact that there are hundreds of disease-free herds in the state lost sight of for this is one of the greatest of attractions to the out-of-state buyers.

The probable future market problems, and what Wisconsin dairymen must strive for in order to maintain and increase their enviable reputations as producers of high grade, prosperity bringing dairy cows, is also outlined.

STATE BOOZE FINES EXCEED $750,000

The profits to the state of Wisconsin of sinning and being found out under the Sevenson state prohibition enforcement acts during 1922 were more than $750,000, State Prohibition Commissioner W. Staun Smith estimates.

The money collected from liquor fines goes into the state common school fund.

Enforcement of prohibition by state and local officers during 1922 more than tripled the receipts of $283,636 of 1921, Mr. Smith said. The total number of convictions was boosted to nearly the 5,000 mark from the 1,544 total of 1921, he believed.

Mr. Smith based his estimates on complete returns for the year from 23 of the less populous counties, which listed 619 convictions compared with 298 in 1921. The amount taken in fines jumped from $40,220 in these counties to $70,751. Jail sentences in the same territory numbered 574. These figures do not include federal convictions under the Volstead act nor penalties imposed under local ordinances.

Tourist Who Received Chamber of Commerce Christmas Card Praised Appleton and Its Campsite in Editorial Comment Given New Jersey Newspaper.

Appleton as a hospitable city was given a cordial boost in an editorial appearing recently in the Herald, a newspaper published at Summit, N. J. The beautiful tourist camp at Allie park was described and some facts given about the city.

The Rev. H. C. Lytle of Summit, who made an automobile trip across the continent last summer, is responsible for the article. He received the Christmas greeting card of the chamber of commerce sent to all tourists who registered at the camp, and called his local newspaper's attention to the expression of cordiality.

An editorial followed, in which the Rev. Mr. Lytle praised Appleton warmly and reviewed some of the things he saw here. He was especially pleased with the tourist campsite.

RADIO PATER

Two members of President Harding's cabinet boast of kin who have succeeded in flashing amateur messages across the Atlantic.

They are Herbert Hoover, secretary of commerce, and Harry M. Daugherty, attorney general.

Hoover's son, Herbert Jr., recently communicated with amateurs in Switzerland, 5000 miles away. He was stationed at the Bureau of Standards' experimental station in Washington, where he had built his own set. Now he is conducting further experiments with the same set while he is attending Leland Stanford University in California.

The other successful amateur is J. E. Daugherty, nephew of the attorney general of Washington Courthouse, O. It was during the recent amateur transatlantic tests that Daugherty was picked up in England, about 3500 miles away. At the same time he established a new long distance record for amateurs in central Ohio.

Daugherty, who is cashier of his town's largest bank, has a double transmitting and receiving set. His station is 8CYR. He built most of it himself and has been experimenting with it for the last eight months.

Tell your druggist you want only the genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother, you must say "California." Refuse any imitation.

MUST SEEK BLANK IF NONE IS RECEIVED

State Income Tax Blanks Will Be Mailed To County By Feb. 1

Information has been forwarded by Anton Oppgaard, acting assessor of incomes, to all newspapers in Outagamie and Waupaca counties, advising all persons who come within the scope of the state income tax law that if they do not receive their income tax blanks by Feb. 1, they should notify the office by postal card or telephone. But no one should call for a blank before Feb. 1, he instructed. The addressing and mailing of 16,000 blanks to persons in both counties occupies considerable time.

"Get your facts and figures together relative to income, and be ready for prompt filing," the instructions say. "The state blank is easy to fill out. It explains itself. Read it. If you answer honestly each question as you come to it, the result can't help but be right."

"Everyone who receives an income blank must file it, whether he has a taxable income or not. Does any one else have to? Yes. Every person who has a taxable income must, whether he receives a blank or not. It takes only a postal card or a telephone call to get a blank. It is up to you to see that you get one and file it, to avoid penalty."

"No need of going to a lawyer or any one to fix up your state report. Do it yourself. Let some member of the family who writes a fair hand do the writing. However, if you have something difficult, such as profits on a sale, the office will help you. But before you come get all your figures ready, and fill them in as you can, and then take care of them."

If Your Picture Is In Outdoor Case You Are Attractive Or Popular

Photographer Has Definite Rules For Selecting Displays—Some Protest—Others Request Exhibit Of Picture

The photographer's showcase, wherein he displays the best of his wares and the most prominent of his subjects, often bring wrath to bear upon his head. Some people so dislike to see their caricatures stuck up in front of the local studio that they promptly tell the photographer about it, in case they should be among the honored ones, and implore him to spare them the disgrace by removing the picture.

But how little they know about the reason and how foolish they would feel should someone inform them the displaying is really an honor. Local artists don't merely pick their pictures at random as many may suppose. They have a method as practical and sensible as the merchant's manner of advertising.

Most of the local photographers follow one principle in the choice of their display pictures. It is the degree to which the person is known in town. A person who is well known is always the choice provided the picture is a good reproduction.

MUST BE CORRECT

One photographer, however, puts the technical correctness of the picture slightly before the popularity of the subject. Sometimes a picture, while not extremely good, might contain all else that the artist would consider essential for a beautiful picture. To the eye of the artist the details many times not seen by others are apparent, thus making a photo much better to his eye than to the person who looks for the arrangement of the hair or dress or for the facial expression. Still, another photographer selects a number of pictures which he thinks will be of interest to the general public and then fills his case. By putting in quite a number of photos at a time he changes the display less frequently, sometimes leaving them for several months. A few of the local studios get out different displays nearly every month.

Exactly opposite to the person who absolutely refuses to have his picture offered to the public gaze is the one who asks to have it placed among others displayed. Many persons having a good picture desire their friends to see it and therefore consider the photographer's display an ideal place to have it in view. Some of the local artists have even been offered money as an inducement to post certain photos. Many persons who have pictures taken of babies desire the views be placed in the showcase.

FARMERS STEPPING LIVELY THESE DAYS; FIELD MICE, REASON

Farmers who were observed last week in the act of stamping down the snow under their apple trees with their feet, were not playing a new kind of game, but were simply trying to make their trees mouse-proof.

Field mice, when deprived of their regular spring, summer and fall menu, are usually forced to the less inviting fare of the bark of fruit trees. Since the mice are in the habit of crawling to the trees under the grass and snow, the farmers seek to demolish the passages by treading down the snow.

CAPTAIN BLOOD

by Rafael Sabatini
© RAFAEL SABATINI
ADAPT. NEA SERVICE

"I'll not be Bishop himself," said Wolverstone, between question and assertion.

"No," Blood closed his telescope. "I don't know who it is."
This deputy proved to be an officer named Calverley, a vigorous, self-sufficient fellow, comparatively fresh from England, whose manner made it clear that he came fully instructed by Colonel Bishop upon the matter of how to handle the pirates.

"Good day to you, sir," Blood hailed him pleasantly. "I have the honor to give you welcome aboard the Arabella. My name is Blood—Captain Blood, at your service. You may have heard of me."

Calverley stared hard. The airy manner of this redoubtable buccaner was hardly what he had looked for in a desperate fellow, compelled to ignominious surrender.

Lord Julian advanced a step and bowed perfunctorily and rather disdainfully to that very disdainful officer.

"I have the honor to inform you, sir," he said stiffly, "that Captain Blood holds a commission in the King's service under the seal of my Lord Sunderland, His Majesty's Secretary of State."

"And who the devil may you be?" Calverley exploded.

Colder still and more distant than ever grew his lordship's voice.

"You're not very civil. My name is Wade—Lord Julian Wade. I am His Majesty's envoy to these barbarous parts, and my Lord Sunderland's near kinsman. Colonel Bishop has been notified of my coming."

Then sudden change in Calverley's manner at Lord Julian's mention of his name showed that the notification had been received, and that he had knowledge of it.

"I... I believe that he has," said Calverley, between doubt and suspicion. "That is: that he has been notified of the coming of Lord Julian Wade. But... but... ahead of this ship... The officer made a gesture of helplessness, and, surrendering to his bewilderment, fell abruptly silent."

"I was coming out on the Royal Mary."

"That is what we were advised."

"But the Royal Mary fell a victim to a Spanish privateer, and I might never have arrived at all but for the gallantry of Captain Blood, who rescued me."

Captain Blood thrust a parchment under Calverley's bulging eyes. The officer scanned it, particularly the seals and signatures. He stepped back, a baffled, impatient man.

"I must return to Colonel Bishop for my orders," he informed them. "At that moment a lane was opened in the ranks of the men, and through this came Miss Bishop, followed by her cotillion woman. Over his shoulder Captain Blood observed her approach."

"Perhaps, since Colonel Bishop is with you, you will convey his niece to him. Miss Bishop was aboard the Royal Mary also, and I rescued her together with his lordship."

Sweet thus from surprise to surprise, Captain Calverley could do no more than bow again.

"As for me," said Lord Julian, with intent to make Miss Bishop's departure free from all interference on the part of the buccaners, "I shall remain aboard the Arabella until we reach Port Royal. My compliments to Colonel Bishop. Say that I look forward to making his acquaintance there."

CHAPTER XXII
Hostilities

In the great harbor of Port Royal the Arabella rode at anchor. Aboard with the Arabella, across the harbor, were the flat-fronted white buildings of that imposing city that came down to the very water's edge.

On a cane day-bed that had been set for him on the quarter-deck, sheltered from the dazzling, blistering sunshine by an improvised awning of brown sailcloth, lounged Peter Blood, a call-bound, well-humored copy of Horace's Odes neglected in his hands.

"Things had not sped at all well with him in the past fortnight since his acceptance of the King's commission. As Blood and Lord Julian had stepped ashore together, they had been met by Bishop, who took pains to dissemble his chagrin at the turn of events and his determination to change it.

"You are Lord Julian Wade. I understand," was his truculent greeting. For Blood at the moment he had nothing beyond a malignant glance.

"You have granted, I am told, the King's commission to this man." His very tone betrayed the bitterness of his rancor. "Your motives were no doubt worthy... your gratitude to him for delivering you from the Spaniards. But the thing itself is unthinkable, my lord. The commission must be canceled."

"I see, sir," said Lord Julian. "That you do not yet quite apprehend the circumstances. If it is a mistake to grant Captain Blood a commission, the mistake is not mine. I am acting upon the instructions of my Lord Sunderland, and with a full knowledge of all the facts, his lordship expressly designated Captain Blood for this commission if he accepted it."

Colonel Bishop's mouth fell open in surprise and dismay.

"Lord Sunderland designated him?" he asked, amazed.

"Expressly. Let me present Captain Blood."

Blood's thoughts were upon this and other things as he lounged there on the day-bed. He had been a fortnight in Port Royal, his ship virtually a unite now in the Jamaica squadron. And when the news of it reached Tortuga and the buccaners who awaited his return, the name of Captain Blood would become a thing of exorcism, and before all was done his life might pay forfeit for what would be accounted a treacherous defection.

But that had approached unnoticed from the shore came screaming and bumping against the great red hull of the Arabella, and a raucous voice sent up a hailing shout. From the ship's belfry two silvery notes rang clear and sharp, and a moment or two later the bosun's whistle shrilled a long wail.

The sounds disturbed Captain Blood from his disgruntled musings.

"A note for you from the Deputy-Governor," said the master shortly, as he proffered a folded sheet.

Blood broke the seal, and read Pitt, loosely clad in shirt and breeches, leaned against the rail the while and watched him, unmistakable concern imprinted on his fair, frank countenance.

"It is a very peremptory summons," said Blood, and passed the note to his friend.

The young master's gray eyes skimmed it. Thoughtfully he stroked his golden beard.

"You'll not go?" he said between question and assertion.

"Why not? Haven't I been a daily visitor at the...?"

"But I'll be about the Old Wolf that he wants to see you. It gives him a grievance at last."

"Why did ye let Wolverstone and the others go?" cried Jeremy, with a touch of bitterness. "You should have seen the danger."

"How could I in honesty have prevented them? It was in the bargain." And as Pitt did not answer him: "Ye see?" he said, and shrugged.

"I'll be getting my hat and cane and sword, and so ashore in the cockpit."

Blood climbed down into the waiting boat. He knew that in going ashore that morning he carried his life in his hands. Because of this, it may have been that when he stepped on to the narrow mole he gave order that the boat should stay for him at that spot.

Walking leisurely, he skirted the embattled wall, and passed through the great gates into the courtyard.

On his right stretched a spacious garden, beyond which rose the white house that was the residence of the Deputy-Governor. In that garden's main avenue he caught sight of Miss Bishop alone. He crossed the courtyard with suddenly lengthened stride.

"Good morning to ye, ma'am," was his greeting as he overtook her. "I am pressed," she informed him. "So you will forgive me if I do not say."

"You were none so pressed until I came," he protested, and if his thin lips smiled, his blue eyes were oddly hard.

"Since you perceive it, sir, I wonder that you trouble to be so insistent."

"Faith, you explain yourself after a fashion," said he. "But since it was word or less in your service that I donned the King's coat, you should suffer it to cover the thief and pirate."

"I'll not be detaining you any longer, ma'am. After all, the cursed thing I did for nothing can be undone. You'll remember that it was your hardness drove me."

She moved to depart, then checked, and faced him again.

"You take that tone! You dare to take that tone!" she cried. "Do you dare to upbraid me because I will not take your hands, when I know you for a murderer and worse?"

He stared at her open-mouthed.

"A murderer—!" he said at last. "Did you not murder Levasseur?"

Biggest Debt
Of War Is To
The Children

BY MARIAN HALE
Reparations! The whole world is talking of what one nation owes to another. But the real reparations are due to the children.

Such is the assertion of Mrs. Winifred Backville Stoner, the famous teacher and exponent of "the natural system of education."

"How the war-torn countries are to pay their debts among themselves," she says, "is infinitely less important than how they are going to pay their debts to their little ones."

BACK FROM EUROPE
Mrs. Stoner is just back from Europe, whither she went to study conditions among children.

"Everywhere," she relates, "the seeds of hatred are still being sown. The German children are taught to hate the children of this country, as well as those of England and France."

"The French children are bitter and disillusioned."

"In Italy the little ones are unbelievably greedy and grasping."

USED TO HORRORS
"In Austria they are practically in a state of coma from undernourishment."

"The children of Europe have seen dreadful sights. They are older than their parents. They must be brought together in common interests and in a spirit of friendliness and love if we are to avert another war more terrible than the last."

CAUSES OF WAR
"The five causes of war," says Mrs. Stoner, "are ignorance, greed, urgent need, different tongues and different creeds."

"To combat these we must agree on some secondary language to be taught to every child as well as his own. Thus the children of the world may become acquainted. Then good music, games and education must establish friendly relations among them. They must return to happiness and be shown that he two big things in life are self-control and the joy of service."

Women Disagree On Whether Heart
Balm Suits Should Be Prohibited

BY MARIAN HALE
Are breach of promise suits doomed?

Are we going to permit the wealthy suitor to take back the solitaire without risk of court proceedings and a judgment?

A bill to eliminate breach of promise suits from among the grounds on which divorce claims may be based will be introduced by Representative Martin Hays at the coming session of the Massachusetts Legislature.

In many instances, Hays says, such suits are only "holdups." He believes any man, as well as any woman, has a right to break a matrimonial engagement without being liable to a suit for "heart balm."

JUST HIS MONEY
Adelaide Steedman, national organizer and field research secretary for the Woman's Party agrees with him.

"Breach of promise suits," she says, "ordinarily are only legalized blackmail. All the woman wanted in the first place was the man's money. She doesn't care how she gets it."

"Undoubtedly there are women who are badly treated by men, but usually they are not the ones who feel that their broken hearts could be mended with money."

"I believe in equality for men as well as for women. It is just as fair to expect one to pay for a broken engagement as the other. I believe neither should."

COUNTS DOLLARS
Mrs. Barbara Dolder, attorney, considers that circumstances often justify a woman in suing for breach of promise.

"So long," she contends, "as the state recognizes home making and motherhood as woman's highest duties, marriage is the most important thing in her life."

"So if a man asks a woman to marry him, and by becoming engaged to him, keeps other men from paying her attention and proposing matrimony to her, she has a right to demand a settlement from him in case he backs out."

"It is possible for her to calculate her loss in dollars."

DOESN'T MUCH MATTER
Nonette Price, musician, thinks it makes very little difference to the average woman whether the law is repealed or not.

"Comparatively few women have availed themselves of it," she points out.

"Most women show good sportsmanship. If they lose in the game of love, they don't complain. Few want a man's money as a substitute for his love, no matter what their legal rights may be."

Life Of Great Dramatist Is
Theme Of Play

BY JAMES W. DEAN

New York — Clemence Dane has found more drama in the life of Shakespeare than in all the lines he ever wrote and has set it upon the stage with a beauty of words that rivals the poetry of the famous bard. This play, "Will Shakespeare," makes the reviewer thumb the dictionary in search of new encomiums to use, the many other excellent plays of the season having exhausted a fair vocabulary. After all there is just one thing to call this play—great.

Miss Dane presents Shakespeare as a puppet of women lifted to glory by the very adversity of his loves.

First Anne Hathaway deceived him into marrying her and his discovery of her lie drove him from Stratford to London, or, at least, gave him the excuse to leave.

In London he pursued a love affair with Mary Fitton, who unwiltingly received his attentions. She simulated affections for the poet because the queen commanded it. It was she who inspired "Romeo and Juliet." Then she deceived him.

An in the end Shakespeare takes up his pen and writes for England at the command of Queen Elizabeth who deems his broken heart not an exemption from his duty to his country but the urge and purpose of a useful and patriotic life.

Thus Miss Dane presents a feminist conception of England's great man; she makes of him an ordinary man, reflecting the greatness of extraordinary women.

Otto Kruger presents Will Shakespeare as such a man. He lends to the character none of the glamor and color that surrounds the illustrious name.

Haidee Wright is fully as regal and imposing as Queen Elizabeth ever was. Perhaps she is the reincarnation of the queen, she lives the part so truly.

Winifred Lenihan made just such an Anne Hathaway as a poet would have desired. But Katherine Cornell was hardly the sort of Mary Fitton to have inspired so romantic a tale as "Romeo and Juliet." However, she probably played the part as Clemence Dane conceived it.

MARRIAGE A LA-MODE

In Russia, the best man attends the bride, not the bridegroom. Even the poorest bride has her dowry and an elaborate tressou, and the wedding is an elaborate affair.

The groom is supposed to make some gift to a church or religious order, and the bride must present the gift to the icon of the Virgin.

In some parts of Russia she must present the village priest with a pair of white doves.

Of course, these customs have been modified, in many cases, by soviet rule.

Wants Women
To Combine
To End Wars

WOMEN who are international neighbors should know each other, says Mrs. Hyde, New York society woman and chairman of foreign tours for the national board of the Y. W. C. A.

"A League of Nations Friends would be," she continues, "the very best league against war."

At her beautiful state, Mrs. Hyde keeps open house to foreign students visiting in this country. Representative American homes should be open to them, she believes to encourage a spirit of international hospitality.

After securing his passage on the Zealand, Barrett went to the office of his personal lawyer.

"Allison, I'm leaving for Europe tomorrow," he told the kind but grave senior partner. "I'll be gone long enough to establish grounds for a suit for divorce by my wife. Desertion, of course. I want you to do everything legitimate to facilitate the action."

The old man rose hastily, agitated, profoundly troubled.

"Why, John Barrett, I didn't know—never dreamed—have you thought this over—have you considered—"

"Everything. Meanwhile see that my family has everything of mine but the bare necessities of my travel abroad. Get together with Rex Warren, my wife's lawyer. Have things go through with as little distress to Anita as possible."

Allison drummed with his fingers. "Just a minute, Barrett! Aren't you lacking in frankness a little? I'm an old man, I can talk to you plainly. What am I to say to those who mention—Mya Dean? Now, Barrett, everyone knows she is going tomorrow too—it was in the papers. Big newspaper assignment. Far East or somewhere."

"Damn it, Allison, how dare—"

"That will not answer the question tomorrow any more than it does now. I couldn't take your case on any such ground as desertion when it's known that you and Miss Dean left for Europe the same day. Why, your wife won't need to stir out of the state to bring suit."

Barrett leaped to his feet. "Miss Dean sails on the Cedric for the Balkan states. I am hooked on the Zealand for Holland."

Old Allison shrugged a thin shoulder. "Theoretically that ought to make a difference."

"You mean you don't believe me?"

"I mean that others will not."

"Then they will have to make the best of their doubts. Goodbye!"

Barrett had come so close to changing his mind under Allison's terse arguments that he pushed to Myra for the support it would give him merely to see her for a moment.

He found her little house locked, boarded up, not a soul about. She had deliberately run away from him.

DEEP WATERS

Chapter 16—The Love Bird Flies

By Zoe Beckley

Want To Bring Back Big
Hats For Evening Wear

An effort is being made by the milliners to revive the evening hat, for they declare, with some reason, that a large hat is never so charming as when it is worn with a décollete gown. But the large evening hat, suitable for dining at restaurants, must still dispute favor with the head-dress, which outlines the form of the head and keeps it small. Designers use tulle for some charming examples of headgear, which are halfway between hats and head-dresses. One of these consists of a band of ribbon, in this case, peach-bloss, combined with tulle matching the hair, which ties in a great bow over the right ear, with ends falling to the shoulder. Another of the same light brown tulle, reminiscent of the mob cap in vogue at the time of Charlotte Corday, has a border of tightly massed folds of tulle all about the face, making a sort of ruche. A delightful evening hat from the same house is made with a narrow brim of brown velvet, banded above with kolmsky, and crowned with two frills of matching brown lace, thrown back and falling on each side of the head.

DANCING COMFORT
Trimming is nearly always placed at the right, in order that one side may be left free for dancing. There are even special dancing hats cut much wider on the left side than on the right, leaving the right side of the face and the shoulder perfectly free so as not to interfere with one's partner. The turban is offered in great variety for the same reason, which is based on good sense, for we have sympathized with men in their efforts to avoid being permanently blinded by the sharp brims of their partners' enormous hats. There is even a new variety of turban, which looks for all the world like that worn by a noble in an ancient Persian miniature. This shape is made high, narrow and straight at the sides, of colored woolen cashmere and twists a gold cord about it, halfway up, which fastens with a plaque of green galalith.

SPRING PREDICTIONS
The most characteristic novelties in fashionable mid-season collections are: the wide short bolero jackets worn over a blouse or a lining which is longer than they are themselves, and which is finished with a tight band around the hips, skirts with godets, groups of plaits, and especially sundress blouses, spreading towards the hem and placed in front, sleeves of two materials, one making the upper and the other the lower part, capuchon collars in bright printed materials; a large number of frocks and tailcoats in navy blue wool rep, trimmed with brightly printed crepe de chine, or silk poplin; evening gowns with drapery pulled towards the middle of the front, and the back very light, with the skirts sometimes longer in the front than in the back, sashes tied at the side front or directly in front, either tied in great bows, or in "choux," scarfs tied about the hips with bows on either one or both sides, towards the front.—Vogue.

GOOD MANNERS

At any public entertainment or gathering—theater, opera, or lecture—it is very bad form to arrive late. If tardiness is unavoidable, however, one should remain at the rear of the auditorium until an intermission. Then one may take one's seat, with an apology to those it is necessary to dislodge.

Adventures Of
The Twins

Light Fingers Hides

Nancy and Nick were having the finest day ever. It was better than riding on a merry-go-round and getting the brass ring.

They were in the Fairy Queen's magic automobile, rolling along in the nice, smooth white Milky Way up in the sky. And let me tell you, my dears, the Milky Way is the very best place to ride you can imagine.

It is made of star dust mixed with cloud vapor and then rolled flat and smooth by the Moon.

Of course, some books say it's made up of stars, great big ones, but it certainly doesn't look it.

But anyway, that's where Nancy and Nick were riding.

Some wonderful things grow alongside of the Milky Way. There's the Dreaming Tree, and a Christmas Tree, and a Wishing Tree, and a Peppermint Tree, and a Peanut Tree, and a Balloon Tree, and a lot of others.

No wonder Nancy and Nick were happy.

"We'll soon have to go down out of the sky," sighed Nancy. "The Fairy Queen will be wanting her automobile and she'll think we are never coming."

Little did Nancy suspect, and little did Nick dream, that a pair of eyes were watching them. A pair of bright, mischievous eyes, belonging to a bad little fairy called Light Fingers.

Yes, sir! Light Fingers was hiding behind a queer little board house and peeping out at them. He had a pocketful of sharp tacks and he was going to sprinkle them on the road before the Twins got there.

He hummed to himself:

"A dicky bird sat on a juniper tree
Tum dum, to tum dum, to tum dum.

There never was anyone smarter than me,
Oh, tum dum, to tum dum, to tum dum."

"Hee, hee, hee! Here goes! Now for some fun!" And he reached for the tacks.
